KPMG Sikhing justice

Tricky audits are one problem for KPMG. Religious crusades are quite another. During the firm's administration of Sikh businessman Hardial Bhabra's TV production company 11 years ago, sacred scriptures were allegedly lost. Now the Sikh Council UK and the Sikh former Labour government minister Parmjit Dhanda have added their voices to a growing campaign. They are planning a big demonstration outside KPMG's London offices, and demanding to know either what happened to the artefacts or their immediate return. Calling all relic hunters.
